"If he is ordered to extend the time, he will do so. But he takes occasion to say that the Attorney General's opinion "opens a broad macadamized road for perjury and fraud to travel on." He "regrets to differ from the President," but "regrets" is a very weak word. He is not "regretting" to say that he has been ordered to execute a law to which the President has been in a bitter antagonism! This is certainly a very unusual and extraordinary language. We remember no parallel to it in recent military history.—If Gen. Sheridan was engaged in a popular election, that he should properly make such an issue with the President would be all right. But he is holding an appointment under the President, and is directed, as a subordinate officer of the army, to execute a certain law of the land. How can he sit in judgment upon the orders he receives from

Another paper, equally orthodox, which justifies all the extreme measures of Congress, and applauds the idea of visiting upon the heads of leading rebels condign punishment for their crimes, with equal vehemence commends the pardon of General LONGSTREET, and intimates further favors as a reward for purging himself of political heterodoxies.

We have read of orthodox politicians and preachers, who despised rebels with as much fervor as they hated Satan, laying their hands upon the heads of converts with pious benedictions and hopeful promises, though perhaps in the recesses of some

They will be accompanied in their conveyance by the Rev. Dr. Samson, of Columbia College, Washington; Rev. Dr. Williams, of the First Baptist Church, Baltimore; Rev. Professor Thomas Hume, of Petersburg; but now of the Danville (Va.) Female College; Professor Huntington, of Columbian College; Rev. T. V. Tobey, of Alabama; Rev. Wm. D. Thomas, of Greenville, S. C., and several lay friends. Never before, perhaps, has there been more precious freight than will accompany her blue waters on this interesting voyage. May propitious skies and prosperous winds waft them onward.

A despatch from Galveston to the New York Tribune states that since the delivery of the recent opinion of the Attorney General, Mayor Haviland, who was removed by Gen. Griffin for rebel propensities, refused to recognize military authority.

followed after her with a drawn pistol, firing three times without effect, when she entered the house and closed the door; he at once broke the lock, and discharged a fourth shot at her, which struck her in the neck, and proved fatal in an instant. So soon did Detz perceive what he had done than he ran out, apparently frantic, leaping several fences and crossing a steep, pine into a grass field, where he snatched up a draw off his pistol again, and fired the remaining shot into his own head, scattering his brains about, and killing himself almost instantly.

A quarrel between two workmen at a roll mill, at Johnstown, Pa., last week, resulted in the death of one of them. The quarrel was over a roll of sheet iron, and in an instant his body appeared on the opposite side of the wheel with his head almost severed.

The sixth opposes the exemption of the United States Bonds from taxation. The seventh recognises anew the service of the army and navy, and pledges a generous consideration and care of the widows and orphans. The eighth is complimentary to the candidate, Hon. E. F. Pillsbury, and the ninth is in support of the Convention upon the financial affairs of the Government.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 23.—(Overland.)—The most horrible suicides ever heard of were committed in this city this morning. A widow named Maria Giffin, who lived alone, took a single-bladed knife and inflicted a ghastly wound in her abdomen, which completely tore out her bowels, which she found detached from her body, in a painless water beside her. The floor was covered with a great pool of blood, and the knife was a whetstone, with which she sharpened the knife before using it. "Strange as it may seem," she said, "I lived an hour and a half after being embowed, dying at nine o'clock. During that time she was attended by the priest and made her will, bequeathing a considerable property. The cause of the suicide is supposed to have been insanity. M.
